Lock #25 & Lock Keeper's House at C&O Canal

Terminus of Edwards Ferry Road, Poolesville

Federal

The Lockhouse at Edward's Ferry is a 1 1/2-story, three bay brick structure on a stone foundation. The walls are constructed of five-course common bond; the openings are carried by flat brick arches. The north and south end walls have flush gable chimneys with three courses of projecting bricks serving as the chimney caps. On the rear (west) facade, the basement is exposed; access is through two ground-level doors, the lintels of which are flush with the top of the stone foundation walls. The ruins of a second, smaller house-a large chimney and partial foundation walls-stand to the west of the main house. A late 19th or early 20th century photograph, on display at the west end of the parking lot on site, depicts several outbuildings, including what appears to be a barn to the southwest of the house, and a smaller frame building between the house and the lock. Southeast of the house is C&O Canal Lock 25, constructed of red Seneca sandstone. A bridge crosses the lock, leading to the Edwards Ferry landing west of the complex, now used for recreational purposes.

The Potomac River is calm and narrow here, making it an ideal location for a ferry crossing. In 1791, Edwards Ferry began to operate here, connecting Maryland farmers to the Goose Creek Canal in Virginia and to Leesburg markets. The ferry closed in 1836 but the community that grew around it continued, carrying on the name. Over time, a general store, a warehouse, and 36 residents composed the Edwards Ferry community. With the coming of the C&O Canal, the small village prospered from the increase in commerce. During the Civil War, Edwards Ferry connected Union Maryland with Confederate Virginia. Harper's Weekly depicted Union troops passing through Edward's Ferry. A copy of this lithograph appears on Park Service signage at the site. The crossing was guarded by Union troops throughout the war. In October of 1861, a Union unit crossed during the Battle of Ball's Bluff, but did not participate. From December 1861 to March 1862, the base of the balloon operations of Thaddeus Lowe was located here. In June 1863 the Union Army crossed here over twin pontoon bridges on the way to Gettysburg. Rebel raiders crossed here in August 1863, July 1864, and February 1865, damaging the canal and Union equipment.
